EDUCATIONAL THEORY

Index to Volume XII

Anderson, Archibald W.—The Teaching Profession: An Example of Diversity in Training and Function, 1.
Aristotle and the Kid Who Can Do Better—Charles Tyner, 178.
Arnstine, Donald G.—Assumed Goals For Problem-Solving and Education: Chinks in the Defense of Verbal Learning, 226.
Art As an Ingredient of Education—Walter Marcuse, 117.
Assumed Goals for Problem-Solving and Education: Chinks in the Defense of Verbal Learning—Donald G. Arnstine, 226.
Ausubel, David P.—In Defense of Verbal Learning: Beams in the Eyes of a Critic, 230.

Bayles, Ernest E.—Comments on the Responses to the Presidential Address, 146.
Bayles, Ernest E.—Educational Imperatives-The Presidential Address, 129.
Behavioral Theory, Verbal Magic, and Education—Ellis B. Page, 73.
Belth, Marc—Prospects For a Discipline of Education, 193.
Broudy, Harry S.—Teaching Machines: Threats and Promise, 151.
Brubacher, John D.—Response to Presidential Address, 140.
Burns, Hobert W.—The Logic of the "Educational Implication", 53.

Castell, Alburey—Education as a Goad to Philosophy, 91.
Clements, Millard—Theory and Education, 124.
Comments on the Responses to the Presidential Address—Ernest E. Bayles, 146.
Critique of Criticisms of Education, A—George L. Newsome, Jr. and Albert J. Kingston, Jr., 218.

Decisions and Curriculum Design—Phillip Hughes, 187.
Demos, George D.—Reconstructionism: A Misinterpreted Philosophy, 87.
John Dewey's Liberalism—George D. Dykhuizen, 45.
Donovan, Charles F., S.J.—On the Possibility of Moral Education, 184.
Drake, William E.—Limitations of the Empirical Approach to the Field of Higher Education, 79.
Dykhuizen, George D.—John Dewey's Liberalism, 45.

Ecker, David W.—Teaching Machines and Aesthetic Values, 170.
Education as a Goad to Philosophy—Alburey Castell, 91.
Educational Imperatives-The Presidential Address—Ernest E. Bayles, 129.
Epistemological Considerations in Relation to the Use of Teaching Machines—Elizabeth Steiner Maccia, 234.
Epperson, David C. and Schmuck, Richard A.—An Experimentalist Critique of Programmed Instruction, 247.
Experimentalist Critique of Programmed Instruction, An—David C. Epperson and Richard A. Schmuck, 247.
Explanation and the Teaching of History—John R. Palmer, 205.

Function of the Culture in Isaac Berkson's Theory of Education, The—Lorin McMackin, 106.

Guttchen, Robert S.—On Ethical Judgment and Education, 65.

Hughes, Phillip—Decisions and Curriculum Design, 187.

In Defense of Verbal Learning: Beams in the Eyes of a Critic—David P. Ausubel, 230.

Kingston, Albert J., Jr. and Newsome, George L., Jr.—A Critique of Criticisms of Education, 218.
Kneller, George F.—Philosophy, Education and Separatism, 34.
Kneller, George F.—Reply to "The Philosophy of Education In a New Key" By C. D. Hardie (University of Tasmania), 99.

Limitations of the Empirical Approach to the Field of Higher Education—William E. Drake, 79.
Logic of the "Educational Implication", The—Hobert W. Burns, 53.

Maccia, Elizabeth Steiner—Epistemological Considerations In Relation to the Use of Teaching Machines, 234.
McMackin, Lorin—The Function of the Culture in Isaac Berkson's Theory of Education, 106.
Marcuse, Walter—Art as an Ingredient of Education, 117.
Method-Ideology and Educational Ideologies—John W. Thompson, 110.
Motivation as a Situational Process—John F. Ohles, 102.

Nash, Paul—Response to Presidential Address, 142.
Newsome, George L., Jr. and Kingston, Albert J., Jr.—A Critique of Criticisms of Education, 218.

Ohles, John F.—Motivation as a Situational Process, 102.
On Ethical Judgment and Education—Robert S. Guttchen, 65.
On the Possibility of Moral Education—Charles F. Donovan, S.J., 184.

Page, Ellis B.—Behavioral Theory, Verbal Magic, and Education, 73.
Palmer, John R.—Explanation and the Teaching of History, 205.
Philosophy, Education and Separatism—George F. Kneller, 34.
Prospects for a Discipline of Education—Marc Belth, 193.

Reconstructionism: A Misinterpreted Philosophy—George D. Demos, 87.
Reply to "The Philosophy of Education In a New Key" By C. D. Hardie (University of Tasmania)—George F. Kneller, 99.
Response to Presidential Address—John D. Brubacher, 140.
Response to Presidential Address—Paul Nash, 142.

Schmuck, Richard A. and Epperson, David C.—An Experimentalist Critique of Programmed Instruction, 247.
Sechrest, Lee and Strowig, R. Wray—Teaching Machines and the Individual Learner, 157.
Strowig, R. Wray and Sechrest, Lee—Teaching Machines and the Individual Learner, 157.

Teaching Machines and Aesthetic Values—David W. Ecker, 170.
Teaching Machines and the Individual Learner—Lee Sechrest and R. Wray Strowig, 157.
Teaching Machines: Threats and Promise—Harry S. Broudy, 151.
Teaching Profession: An Example of Diversity in Training and Function, The—Archibald W. Anderson, 1.
Theory and Education—Millard Clements, 124.
Thompson, John W.—Method-Ideology and Educational Ideologies, 110.
Tyner, Charles—Aristotle and the Kid Who Can Do Better, 178.

Viktor E. Frankl and 'The Responsible Self'—Arthur G. Wirth, 241.

Wirth, Arthur G.—Viktor E. Frankl and 'The Responsible Self', 241.